Respondent's Case

The respondent is an employment agency who employed the appellant as a result of a transfer of undertakings from the previous contract holder in June 2011. The appellant was a seasonal employee. He had been working in the same position for 5 years so was aware that the work was seasonal. In October 2011 the appellant was notified that his current position was coming to an end and he was invited to a meeting on the 18th or 19th of October 2011 to discuss further employment. The appellant was subsequently offered an alternative position but declined. The respondent was aware that the appellant was living outside the jurisdiction and only took up employment again in March 2012.

Appellant's Case

The appellant had been in his position for five years. The position was not seasonal and he had never had a break in service up to October 2011. The appellant disputes being contacted by the respondent at any stage and being offered alternative employment.

Determination

The Tribunal are satisfied that a redundancy situation did not exist within the respondent. The appellants did not engage with the respondent in relation to any further employment. The appeal under the Redundancy Payments Acts, 1967 to 2007 fails.
